Digital Infrastructure Deal of the Year, Asia-Pacific

Vodafone New Zealand (Brookfield Asset Management, Morrison & Co)

The acquisition of Vodafone New Zealand was the largest sponsor-led telecoms deal in the APAC region last year and one of the largest acquisitions in New Zealand's history. The business is New Zealand's largest mobile network provider with 40 percent of market share by revenue. It is also the second largest fixed broadband supplier. The company has around two million mobile customers, compared with around 700 million for former parent company Vodafone Group. Vodafone previously tried to sell its New Zealand arm to Sky Network Television but failed to gain regulatory clearance.
